

SCHOOLS

Tully community will talk about going green

ELIZABETH DORAN

STAFF WRITER

“Growing Tully Green, The Next Steps to Protecting Our Environment” will begin at 7 p.m.

Wednesday in the Tully high school auditorium. The community forum is bringing together panelists from industry, government, education, local construction, non-profit organizations and community youth to share insights on how to deal with climate change. Admission is free to the forum, which is designed to increase local awareness and help prompt action.

The event starts at 6 p.m. with a variety of displays, and the panel starts at 7. Panel members include Melissa O'Mara of IBM, Tully Mayor Scott Clark, Jim Bertolo of Anheuser-Busch, J. Kublick, a Tully student; John Bishop of J Bishop Builders, Highland Architects, Kimberly Cameron, a research scientist with SUNY ESF; and Jamie Rodems, school business administrator.

There also is a blog where visitors can post a comment and read comments from others, and answer a short survey. It's at growtullygreen.blogspot.com/](http://growtullygreen.blogspot.com/)

[http://  